OUR QUERY BOX.

"What would be the value of gold, if not used as money at all -i. e., what would be its value in the arts?" Your question is not clear. Do you sean if all the people in the world would cease to use gold at all for a medium of exchange? or do you mean if all laws of all countries providing for the coinage and legal tender of gold should be re-

If you mean the first, it is not a supposable case. It is a mere fancy, not worth discussing.

If you mean the second, it would have no effect whatever on the value of gold. Gold is not used as money because the law provides for its coinage; it does not get its value from legal tender laws. Gold was used as money long, long be fore there was any law on the subject; before coming was invented. It is used as money today in uncivilized countries, which have no laws on the subject, and it is just as valuable there as here. If all laws were repealed, it would still be used as money just as much as it is now. If governments relinquished its comage, that right would fall to the people them selves, and gold would be coined by private parties, as it was done in North Carolina back in the '30's, and in Cali fornia and Utah in the '50's.

If this country were to now adept Jefferson's plan of establishing a ratio for our gold and silver coins and resume coinage (1) how would the government determine the ratio, and (2) What would that ratio be? 1. Jefferson and Hamilton, took the

There is no limit when a currency starts on the down grade. The Chicago platform not only proposes the 50 cent dollar, but it goes further and advocates paper money without limit. The result would be inevitable collapse. The col onies issued some two hundred million dollars of Centineatal currency between 1775 and 1780 and none of it was ever redeemed. In 1781 one thousand dollars worth of paper money was worth only one dollar in specie! We have a mere recent illustration of the same result in the currency of the late southern confederacy, which was valueless at the close of the war The lessons of history are worth heeding.

Standing Up for Missouri. It seems that Mr. Stephens is running the figto the state. He claims that no change should be made, because it could not be for the better. In other words, he asks the people to say that they are catisfied with the prosperity that has been gained under the policies and methods that he represents and proposes to cont in 1e. This is an issue that has little or rothing to do with national politics. It pertains strictly to the personal interests of the citizens of Missouri, and is of more importance to them, practically speaking, than any other in the present campaign. They live in a state that is unexcelled for variety of resources, advantages of soil and climate, and opportunities of commercial growth and greatness The question is, have these facilities been Oregon, - Missouri. properly improved, has the measure of grin been equal to the chances, during the protracted period of Democratic supremacy? Have the prevailing political conditions been favorable to the best development of trade and industry Has there been as much accomplished as the logic of the situation made poseible? Is it as well with us as it should be, considering all of the circumstances?

To say that Missouri has not gone backward, but has prospered in a degree, is to beg the question. The true test lies in the ratio of achievement to the rule in this State stands condemned as a drawback and a misfortune. Missouri's prosperity has been won not because of existing political conditions, but inspite of them. There is every reason to believe that if those conditions had been of a more enlightened and progressive order she would have advanced in every Finest Liquors, respect with far greater rapidity. mony of trade and experience.

The scope of Mr. Curtiss' work practically covers the history of the world's trade and commerce. The author has undoubtedly devoted years of patient research to gathering and arranging his material and presenting his argument. After a careful examination of the results of this stupendous piece of work the fairminded American student and reader will close the book with the conclusion that in our own American policy iaundice, bilious fever, bilious- we have nothing to take back, nothing to apologize for. Under similar conditions our experience has been precisely Tutt's Liver Pills the same as the experience of other nations. In some ways it has even been Ecgland's own experience. A low tariff or no tariff has always increased the importation of foreign goods until our money ran out; multiplied our foreign obligations; produced a balance of trade GILES A. LAUGHLIN against the country; supplanted the dopaired the farmer's home market without improving his market abroad; under m ned domestic prosperity; decreased the industries of the action; dimusished the value of nearly all our property and investments; and robbed labor of its just rewards. The lower the tariff the more videspread and aggravated have been these conditions which paralyze our progress and industries. This is the verdict of our history, and, as the author of this valuable work demonstrates, with a clearness that should carry conviction, it has been the verdict of history in the case of other nations, if facts and figures

> -According to Brother Stokes' statenent the cause of the low prices for commodities is that we have not enough money. We don't know so much about that, government statistics says that in 1873 we had $15,58 per capita, and wheat was $1.15 per bushel, while in 1894 wheat was 49 cents and the per capita $24.33. In 1873 cate was 37 cente and in 1895 they were 19 cen's. In 1873 corn was 48 cente and in 1895 it was 26 cents. In 1873 mess pork was $16.36 per barrel, and in 1895, it was $11.91. In 1873 it coast 20 cents to transport a bushel of wheat from Chicago to New York; in 1895 it ceast 414 cents per bushel. From the official statistical abstract of 1895, t seems that as the per capita of money ressed, prices decreased
